APPENDIX V

QUATRAINS CONCORDANCE OF PREVIOUSLY PUBLISHED TRANSLATIONS AND VERSIONS OF THE QUATRAINS

This appendix can be used by the reader to compare the translations in this book with the English translations and versions of Mawlānā’s quatrains in previously published books that the reader owns or has access (please see the first part of the Bibliography, ‘Works Including Quatrains By or Attributed to Mawlānā Rūmī ‘). The Concordance is a compilation of quatrains in 48 books.

For example, the reader who has the popular volume of versions, The Essential Rumi, can look for references to quatrains in ‘ER,’ as in: ‘F-81/FG-1263: ...Barks-Moyne OS p. 7b [ER p. 36, IR p. 31] (Isf 82)’. This particular version can be found on p. 36 of ‘ER’ (beginning, ‘Today, like every other day, we wake up empty’); it can be compared with the translation in the present book that has the Farhādī-Gamard number 1263. It can also be compared with the other translations and versions listed for this quatrain in the Concordance citation. The following are all the available renderings in the English language of the second half of this particular quatrain:

Barks-Moyne: ‘Let the beauty we love be what we do./ There are hundreds of ways to kneel and kiss the ground.’

Mafī-Kolin: ‘There are a hundred ways to kneel and pray at the altar of the Beloved.’

Khalili: ‘there are a hundred ways to pray/ to prostrate or to be humbled to the ground.’

Houshmand: There are a hundred ways to pray, to kneel./ To bow at the shrine of my friend's beauty.

Saberi: ‘He whose mehrab is the Friend’s Face./ Stands, bends, and prostrates in many prayers.’

Algan-Wright: ‘For whom the CEMAL of the beloved is a MIHRAP, he has a hundred ways of NAMAZ, NIYAZ, RŪKŪ and SECDE.’

Lewis: ‘He whose prayer niche is the Beauty of the Friend knows a hundred ways to pray, prostrate and bow.’

Farhadi-Gamard: ‘There are a hundred kinds of prayer, bowing, and prostration/ For the one whose prayer-niche is the beauty of the Beloved.’
